Portfolio Turnover:

The measure of how frequently a portfolio buys or sells securities. A portfolio with a turnover rate of 100% replaces its entire portfolio through the course of a 12-month period, whereas, a fund with 50% turnover rate replaces half of its holdings during the same time.

- | | |
|---------------------------------|------------------------------------|
| ○ Low (0-33.3% per year) | ○ High (66.6-100% per year) |
| ○ Medium (33.3%-66.6% per year) | ○ Very Active (Over 100% per year) |

Investment Orientation:

- Active - An investment strategy that involves subjective analysis by investment staff professionals on buy, sell, or hold decisions. (IR-active)
- Passive - An investment strategy that relies solely on computer-driven quantitative models, as well as strategies that replicate a selected index. (IR-immune)

Investment Styles:

- Aggressive Growth - Investors in this category invest in companies that have very high revenue, EPS growth rates and multiples relative to the overall market. These companies usually do not pay any dividends and are at the early stages of growth. Aggressive Growth investors exhibit a higher portfolio turnover than other styles of investors.
- Growth - Investors in this category invest in companies with multiples and growth rates higher than the market but do not like to pay extremely high multiples. Growth Investors are not sensitive to yield.
- GARP - GARP investors invest in companies that are valued at a discount to the market but are expected to grow faster than the overall market. GARP investors tend to exhibit longer holding periods, and are not sensitive to yield. Portfolio holdings include companies that are temporarily out of favor in the market.
- Value - Value investors invest in companies that trade at low valuation levels (low P/Es, Price/Book, and PEG) in general, in relation to the market and their peers, and also in relation to their own historic valuation levels. Companies are fundamentally strong and exhibit slow and steady growth characteristics over time. Value investors are long term holders with low portfolio turnover rates.
- Deep Value - Investors in this category employ an extreme style of value investing where they invest in companies with very low valuations versus their own historic valuation, and in relation to the overall market. Usually the companies or the industries they are in have been out of favor in the marketplace for an extended period of time.
- Specialty - Applied to firms with investment strategies that cannot be categorized due to the specific nature of their focus. Industry or sector specific focus is the most common example of a Specialty investor.
- Alternative - Alternative is applied to Hedge Funds that primarily use various strategies that fall outside the traditional investment strategies that can be categorized as the above.
- Other – The style is inclusive of all other investment styles not holding more than 1% of the institutionally managed shares. Additionally, this style is applied to companies that are not investment firms, such as public companies.
